1. The political situation in Brazil is worsening. The Government seems unable to handle the situation. The Government may be stirring up unrest in order to allow Vargas to assume the role of a dictator and thus do away with the democratic form of government.
2. The Army, considered democratic and patriotic, may oust the Vargas government in an effort to bring order out of chaos. The people are not concerned about a period of dictatorship by the Army as they feel certain that the Army would not try to perpetuate itself in office but would, in due time, call for elections.
